FREDERICK DOUGLASS can well afford to have his opposition to the Virginia Bourbons contrasted with George T. Downing's support of them.

"The Southern policy of the Administration" is opposition to the Bourbon Democracy. This is, of course, antagonized by Republican Bourbons.

SENATOR CONKLING has no thought of entering the arena of politics, and the talk about his making speeches in the coming campaign is unfortunately wholly without foundation.

WHEN we said that "Mr. Blaine retired from private life against his wish " we might have added that the security taken for his good behavior in 1884 suggests the idea that he went into General Garfield's Cabinet largely by reason of his own wish.

Malice, detraction, calumny, abuse can do aine no harm .- Washington Post.

No. It is coming out squarely for the Virginia Bourbon Democracy against the Republican party and their Liberal allies that has done the business for Mr. Blaine, Nothing can be to damnation add greater than this.

Don't be frightened, fellow-Republi cins. The newspapers cannot hurt you for advocating the Republican tickets in New York and Pennsylvania. The men who are fighting the Republican party under the pretense of its not being good enough for them are either Democrats now or they hope to be.

Bourson information comes that four negroes have just been killed in South Carolina and a white man's hand hurt. The whites were greatly alarmed. The negroes always have exhibited a most ferocious spirit just before election times. It is very probable that these four negroes had themselves killed for politi-

Mr. Blaine is so passionately devoted to Straightoutism, and so ready to uphold the name of Republicanism in Virginia, even if he knows it will destroy the cause, that we can imagine his impatience to take the stump in Pennsylvania, where the Straightouts are battling against a coalition between Democrats and Independents.

This eminent leader and champion of the colored race is a native Virginian, and will in a few days commence a canana so of that Suste in behalf of the Coalition. candidates for Congress. He dwelt with energy and feeling on the fact that Mr. Blaine totally ignores the existence of the 110,000 voting negro citizens of Virginia, and has no word to say as to what shall be done for them. This is a significant omission. Mr. Blaine knows that the negroes were against his aspirations in 1876 and 1880, because in 1875 he deserted them to win the applause of the great newspapers which were then defending the White Leaguers in Louisiana. Is it not the very ecstacy of audacity for him now to serve notice on the Republicans of Virginia to separate from the mean who have made the downfall of Boarbonism possible? The Bourbon press of Virginia mad Washington is out in full cry for this nimble leader, who is only for the negroes when he can thereby help the Bourbons. Mr. Blaine is a very hingry political wolf in very ordinary sheep's clothing.

Of course the editor of the Post would be an irreclaimable ass if he meant a word of all this, and so it must be credited to the very low estimate he puts on the understanding of some of his readers. If Presidents were to be placed in danger of their lives every time they are harshly criticised for appointments made by them, or for anything else, the Post would have had President Arthur murdered long ago.

TOM OCHILTREE AT HOME. He Tells His People Why He Should Be

Elected to Congress, The Sunday Morning Ledger, of Corpus Christi, of September 17 contains a three-column speech of Major Tom Ochlitree, candidate for Congress on the Independent ticket in the Galveston district, delivered at Market Hall, Corpus Christi, on the 11th instant, from which the following extracts

Ith instant, from which the following extracts are taken:

When I forget that my father was William B. Ochiltree; when I forget that I am a Texan, and when I forget to do justice to this people and the people of this State, then may the shadows of obliviou engulf me, and may I pass as a dream from the memory of my friends! Now, I hold that this people in justice to themselves should send me to Congress; and why? Simply because my long experience in Washington has rendered me peculiarly fitted for the duty. Because I can do more for this section of the country than any other man. Because I have learned by experience the mode and means of securing desired ends in vogue at the National Capital. Because my association and acquadnianceship there are such that all I have to do in the matter of assisting this people is to ack for and receive that help; and, issily, because I am the best man for the place.

against a coalition between Democrats and Independents.

A Bournon has just returned from Virginia with the startling intelligence that the Coalitionists are awfully beaten. This is special and exclusive to the Evening Star.

P. S.—It is since learned that the Star's paragraph above alluded to was left over from last year. The Coalitionists didictetr then than the Star expected.

The soreheads in New York are whining against the Saratoga Convention because of something that occurred in the State committee. Their logic is like that of the drunken fellow who said he loved the name of Hannah because his mother's name was Abigail. The convention was not guided by the committee in the least. It refused to take Madden for chairman at the suggestion of the committee, and proceeded to an election. The majority of the delegates voted for Madden, and this made him the chairman. The men who oppose Judge Folger because a false proxy was imposed upon a man who sain the committee are well aware that it did not in the least affect the nominating convention. We call this sneaking opposition. This offends the Bourbon Democratic editors. We do not write for their approval. The Republicans who begone and the suggestion of the committee are well aware that it did not in the least affect the nominating convention. We call this sneaking opposition. Mr. Blaine and the Negro.

Professor Langston, in conversation with the writer, yesterday, remarked with much emphasis that Mr. Blaine, in his recent interview on the Virginia coalition, had not seen fit to manifest any interest in the welfare of the negro.

Let them enjoy it. Republicans must not take the chidings of takes. Togular you to a knowledge of the truth in his matter, and that is what I believe you de-sire, I will say to you that on Saturday, the 29d insiant, President Arthur stated to several per-sons, of whom I was one, at his resi-dence in the city of New York, that he was not only carnestly for the Liberal movement in North Carolina, and anxious for the election of the whole Coalition ticket (which, of course, includes Dr. York), but that he did not wish his position on the subject to be doubted or misunderstood. This is not, of course, any reason why any voter in North Carolina should support why any voter in North Carolina should support the Coalition, but it is a good reason why the weight of President Arthur's name should not be thrown into the scale against it. You would not be a willing party to a fraud, and the information herein conveyed will save you from the mortification of being an unwilling one. If any voter in North Carolina should desire to know how President Arthur would vote if he was a citizen of that State, you can safely assure him that he would vote for the Coalition ticket throughout. Besides, if you help the free-tende Democracy to abolish duties on imports, internal-revenue taxation will have to be perpetu-ated and increased. How can you abolish internal revenue taxes by indirectly alding a party which Borsey and Garfield.

Touching the liberality and generosity of Dorsey, the attorney said: "He was generous to a fault. Why, he read me a letter which Garfield wrote him from Mentor. It was a long, friendly one, written in the abandon of the greatest friend-ship. In this letter he complained that he was eaten out of house and home. Mentor being away from the railroad station, those who called upor from the railroad station, those who called upon him expected to be entertained. In fact, that he was keeping a hotel for the accommodation of man and beast, and that the demands upon his hospitality had not only depleted his exchequer, but compelled him to borrow of his friends. His provender and crops were gone. When Dorsey got this letter be answered it at once, and inclosed to General Garfield as a present his personal check for $5,000, which check was duly cashed, and the proceeds were used to defray General Garfield's personal expenses while he remained at home from the time of his nomination until his election."—Cincinnati Enquirer, Sept. 27.

THE SPECTRAL BOATMAN.

By the rolling, dark, cold river, Where the timid aspens shiver, Quiver, tremble in the damp, Till the glow-worm lights her lamp.

There a spectral boatman pale,
'Neath the uspen 'walls the gale—
Waits until the north wind's breath
Chills the autumn flowers to death.

When the north winds sweep the moor, With a mattered growl and roar; When the waters, foaming high,

Wet the fen-bats as they fly-Then the spectral beatman pale Screams in concert with the gala-And with key, bony hand Pushes swiftly out from land

When the nearly day is fright Hides her white tace from the night, Then he screams in mad delight, And like bird of prey in flight.
